GAINS AND LOSSES. Mixed Tendency Developed in Stocks-

Closed Strong and Active. New York, April 1.—Price move-ments in the stock market developed a mixed tendency today, gains and losses showing irregularly during the progress of most of the trading. This mixed mayement did not, however, obscure the absorptive power of the mar-ket and the effective character of the new demand which has come into the new demand which has come into the market in the last few days. The high level at which prices were started to-day added to the sharp advance scored yesterday and combined with the material broadening of the participation from miscellaneous cutside sources offering so advantageous an opportunity to convert paper profits into cush that it was taken advantage of on a very large scale by previous purchasers. The professional element on the floor of the stock exchange, on detecting evidence of this realizing, added the weight of extensive short sales and worked for a reaction by offering prices at concessions. It was in the face of these adverse conditions that the market demonstrated most strikprices at concessions. It was in the face of these adverse conditions that the market demonstrated most strikingly its resisting power. Pressure to realize was lessened as prices receded and projective measures were adopted by pushing prices upwards at new points. This aggressive show of strength intimidated the bear and induced them to reverse their operations, buying to cover the shorts put out earlier, and in some eases turning to the long side of the market. The action of the market in the last few days had its effect in bringing in some increase of buying orders at the outset but the concentrated character of the dealings and the concerted operations for the advance gave evidence of an organized speculative party at work in the market, Names were freely bundled about in the day's discussion of the idaptity of the organization, suppositions pointing to wealthy capitalists associated with the great market movements of the pist. These rumors, in king entirely in authenticity as they were, were of great effect in shaping speculative sentiment nevertheless. the question recently asked James J. Corbett in Denver and answered by him as follows:

I have always thought Peter Jackson was one of the world's greatest fighters. He had all the attributes of a puglifist from footwork to judgment of distance and a punch in either hand. He contrasted with Johnson in the point of cleverness. Peter Jackson was a machine in the ring in man respects. Such cannot be said of Johnson. The latter, however, possesses a way of handling himself that is almost as effective as extreme cleverness. He is very awkward in many of his movements, but it is his awkwardness that fools his opponent.

Jackson had a much better left hand than Johnson and he used it to great advantage. I'll never forget how hard I found it to stay away from him.

No change of moment in the rules relating to the forward pass was made, but the rule was clarified in one feature, so that to provide that the ends who are more than one foot behind the scrimmage line shall be out of play and cannot handle the ball. Outfielder Frank Burke wrote to Owner Fred Winkler of Holyoke that he is in fine shape and feels sure that he will hit at a heavier clip than he did last year. Burke's left arm was the chief reason and this is considered the chief reason why he didn't do so well with the bat. However, the arm has been repaired, and Burke reports that it will stand lots of wear and tear. He will leave his Pennsylvania tear. He will leave his Pennsylvania home Monday for Holyoke.

Burke, with Dolan and McCabe, look likely for the outfield. The latter two are former pitchers and will not be asked to return to pitching.

The fight fans who saw my big fights know well how easy it was for me to stay away from a hard wallop coming towards the jaw. Well. Jackson came pretty close to spoiling my record right at the start. And it was with his left hand. So both in the art of punching and in the power behind the wallop Jackson had it on Johnson. Despite all the reports about Johnson's swell head, Jackson probably had it on him. Jackson always said that John L. Sullivan hid behind the color line.

In the judgment of distance Jackson was also the superior of Johnson, but in blocking Johnson probably equals Jackson. No better fight could be wished for than a battle between two men of the caliber of Jackson and Johnson. The former would probably have a big margin to the good at the finish, but there would be some pyrotechnics displayed before the count was gived. Jackson would have been the winner.
